I completed a college degree in Agriculture, with a strong focus on plant cultivation and soil management. The course covered a wide range of topics related to plant biology, crop production, soil science, organic farming, and sustainable agricultural practices.

Through both classroom learning and hands-on training, I gained knowledge in proper planting techniques, soil preparation, composting, and the use of organic fertilizers. I also learned how to analyze soil health, manage pests naturally, and care for crops throughout their growing cycle. This background has given me a solid foundation in both traditional and modern agricultural methods, with an emphasis on environmental responsibility and sustainability.
